LOCATION

Coed Rhiw Saeson is located just to the north east of Llanbrynmair which is 18 miles from Newtown and the major roads network. All distances are approximate.

DESCRIPTION

Coed Rhiw Saeson is accessed via a ford that crosses the Afon Clegyrnant and thence onto a well made track that has been used for timber haulage in the past. This access is shown ABC on the sale plan. Alternatively, the property has several access points into the woodland on the northern side of the river directly off the county road. Of note is a large and convenient stoned area which could be used for timber stacking at point D on the saleplan which is partially situated within the woodland.

Unusually this woodland is stocked with a range of p1960s trees most of which have performed particularly well on this site. Species include Western hemlock, Douglas fir, Sitka spruce with some areas of mixed broadleaves. There is a large quantity of timber ready for harvesting at the current time which can be accessed by extending the existing track further along the southern side of the river to serve the areas of dense timber. Many of these trees are over 30m tall and will produce large amounts of saw logs should a new owner wish to fell and replant the site subject to a felling licence application. Overall this is an impressive woodland that has somehow escaped the eyes of timber merchants. Crops close to the loading area have been thinned recently to favour the best trees. This is possible due to the land-form which protects the woodland from strong winds.

The woodland is classified by Natural Resources Wales (NRW) as a Plantation on an Ancient Woodland Site (PAWS). This classification in no way prevents the continuation of commercial forestry re-planting and, subject to the felling licence conditions and the UK Forestry Standard, this agent believes that further commercial planting could be carried out to continue the tradition of productive woodland in this area of Wales.

The current owners have enjoyed owning the woodland and, whilst their main objective has been the growing of timber for producing income, they have also been fascinated by the isolated location, its landform and the river which is spectacular where it drops into a deep gorge in places along the edge of the property. Visitors to the woodland will find a well trampled path along the bottom edge of the woodland.

Mineral rights are retained by the lessor but the lease does allow the use of stone excavated on site to be used for building and maintaining roads and tracks that benefit the woodland.
